CARNEGIE ENDOWMENT

FOR INTERNATIONAL PEACE

April 6, 2009

Dear Colleague,

Welcome, or for many, welcome back to the Carnegie International Nonproliferation Conference: The Nuclear Order—Build or Break. The nuclear nonproliferation regime is approaching crucial moments of decision that will determine its future. Will nuclear armed states take further steps to demonstrate their commitment to nuclear disarmament? What impact will reinvigorated U.S. leadership have? Will other states and nuclear industry join in common cause to make the vision of a world free of nuclear weapons a reality?

This conference is one of the best opportunities for policy and technical experts and government officials to grapple with urgent threats and to advance the debates that will shape the nonproliferation regime.

One of the strengths of the Carnegie Endowment is our emphasis on providing a global perspective on these issues. This conference attracts an international audience and expertise that is unparalleled outside of official forums. It is our hope that the best minds in this field will use this opportunity to produce new approaches to strengthening the nonproliferation regime.

We are grateful that you have joined this discussion and look forward to your participation.

Sincerely,

Jessica T. Mathews

THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

April 6, 2009

It is a pleasure to send my greetings to the 2009 Carnegie International Nonproliferation Conference.

As I said in Prague, the future of nuclear weapons in the 21st century is fundamental to the peace and security of the world. The spread of nuclear weapons -- and the prospect of nuclear terrorism -- has increased the danger to our people and to the global nonproliferation regime. We have a security and moral responsibility to act. That is why this is a top priority for my Administration and why your work at this conference is so important to our collective effort.

The United States is ready to lead an effort to secure our people and strengthen the global nonproliferation regime. I have stated clearly our commitment to a world without nuclear weapons. Now we are prepared to take several steps to pursue it.

The United States and Russia have agreed to work together to negotiate a follow-on agreement to the START nuclear reduction treaty by the end of this year.

We will pursue ratification of the Comprehensive Test Ban Treaty as soon as possible while maintaining a safe, secure, and reliable nuclear capability to deter our adversaries and reassure our allies.

We will seek a new treaty that verifiably ends the production of fissile materials intended for use in state nuclear weapons.

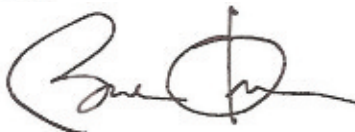

We must also reinvigorate global efforts to prevent proliferation by enhancing the international inspection system, strengthening export controls, and putting in place real and immediate consequences for countries caught breaking the rules or trying to leave the Treaty without cause.

We need a new paradigm for civil nuclear cooperation that allows all countries to enjoy the benefits of nuclear power while avoiding the spread of nuclear weapons and technologies. To that end, we support the international fuel bank and other constructive international initiatives.

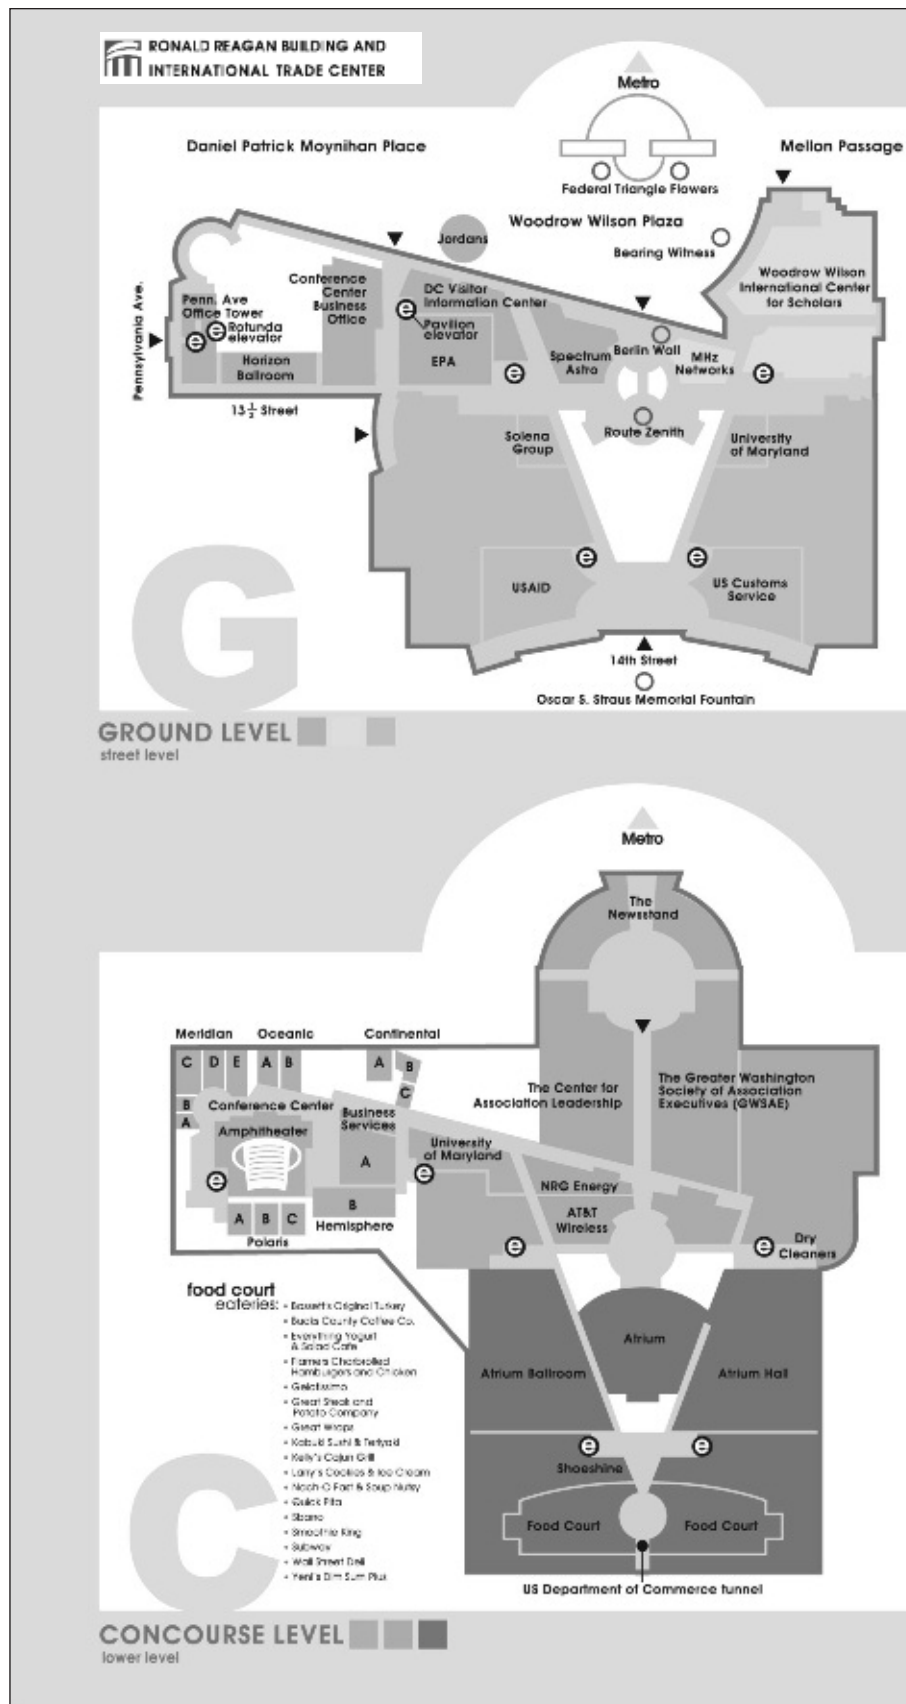

We must address the most immediate and extreme threat to our security by ensuring that terrorists never acquire a weapon. To that end, we will pursue a new effort to secure all vulnerable materials around the world within 4 years.

In short, we will use all of America's political, diplomatic, intellectual, and moral capacity to seek a new chapter in our nonproliferation efforts. This work will not be easy. It will take the cooperation of nations, and the support of groups like those who are gathered at this Conference. There is no higher calling than leaving the world a safer and more peaceful place for our children. That is the work that we have begun.

I look forward to hearing the results of your important deliberations, and I thank you for your continued efforts to promote global peace and security.

THE NUCLEAR ORDER—BUILD OR BREAK

Monday, April 6

9:10 am

Amphitheater

CHAIR: GEORGE PERKOVICH, Carnegie Endowment for International Peace

AMBASSADOR LINTON BROOKS

MORTON HALPERIN, Congressional Commission on the Strategic Posture of the United States

BRAD ROBERTS, Institute for Defense Analyses

ACHILLES ZALUAR, Embassy of Brazil

This session will explore key questions arising from the Congressional Commission on the Strategic Posture of the United States and the new Carnegie book, Abolishing Nuclear Weapons: A Debate. Does emphasizing the deterrent value of nuclear weapons help prevent proliferation or encourage it? If the nuclear-armed states were serious about disarmament, would proliferation stop? Does exploring abolition help renovate the nuclear order or break it? Would safer, more secure and reliable nuclear warheads facilitate nuclear disarmament and security or undermine them? If the U.S. and Russia agreed to reduce to 500 nuclear weapons, would China, India and others reduce accordingly or build up to seek parity with them?

George Perkovich is a Vice President for Studies and the Director of the Nonproliferation Program at the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace. His research focuses on nuclear strategy and nonproliferation, with a focus on South Asia and Iran, and on the problem of justice in the international political economy. He is the author of the award-winning book India's Nuclear Bomb. He is co-author of the Adelphi Paper, Abolishing Nuclear Weapons, published in September 2008 by the International Institute for Strategic Studies. This paper is the basis of the book, Abolishing Nuclear Weapons: A Debate, which includes 17 critiques by 13 eminent international commentators and is now available at www.carnegieendowment.org/nuclearweaponsdebate. Perkovich is also co-author of a major Carnegie report, Universal Compliance: A Strategy for Nuclear Security, a blueprint for rethinking the international nuclear nonproliferation regime. He served as a speechwriter and foreign policy adviser to Senator Joseph Biden from 1989 to 1990. Perkovich is an advisor to the International Commission on Nuclear Nonproliferation and Disarmament and a member of the Council on Foreign Relations' Task Force on U.S. Nuclear Policy.

Ambassador Linton Brooks, now an independent consultant, served from July 2002 to January 2007 as Administrator of the Department of Energy's National Nuclear Security Administration, where he was responsible for the U.S. nuclear weapons program and for the Department's international nuclear nonproliferation programs. He has five decades of experience in national security, much of it associated with nuclear weapons. His government service includes Chief U.S. Negotiator for the START Treaty, Assistant Director of the United States Arms Control and Disarmament Agency, Director of Defense Programs and Arms Control at the National Security Council and a number of Navy and Defense Department assignments as a career naval officer.

Morton Halperin is a Commissioner for the Congressional Commission on the Strategic Posture of the United States. He is also a Consultant to the Open Society Institute and the Open Society Policy Center, as well as a Senior Fellow at the Center for American Progress. Halperin worked for many years for the American Civil Liberties Union (ACLU). He was Director of the Center for National Security Studies from 1975 to 1992; from 1984 to 1992 he was also the Director of the Washington Office of the ACLU. Halperin served in the Clinton, Nixon and Johnson administrations, most recently as Director of the Policy Planning Staff at the Department of State (1998–2001). He is the author of numerous books and articles including The Lawless State (1976) and Self-Determination in the New World Order (1992).

Brad Roberts is a member of the research staff at the Institute for Defense Analyses in Alexandria, Virginia. He is also a Professorial Lecturer in International Affairs at George Washington University. He served previously as Editor of the Washington Quarterly and as a Research Fellow at the Center for Strategic and International Studies and also as Chair of the research advisory council of the Chemical and Biological Arms Control Institute. His research interests focus on the intersection of counterproliferation and nonproliferation strategies.

Achilles Zaluar is Minister-Counselor at the Brazilian Embassy in Washington, D.C., where his portfolio includes nonproliferation, nuclear, defense and multilateral issues. He is most recently the author of "A Realistic Approach to Nuclear Disarmament," included in Abolishing Nuclear Weapons: A Debate by George Perkovich and James Acton. Previously, he served as the Deputy Head of the United Nations Division at the Ministry of Foreign Affairs in Brasilia. In previous assignments, he worked on nonproliferation and export control, including Brazil's relations with the MTCR and NSG control regimes, was Secretary of the interagency group that drafted Brazil's export control law, and was a member of the team responsible for the position papers and the presidential message for Brazil's accession to the NPT. His thesis at the Brazilian Rio Branco Institute was on "Nuclear Non-proliferation and the Security Council."

U.S.-CHINA STRATEGIC STABILITY

Monday, April 6

2:00 pm

Polaris

CHAIR: BRAD ROBERTS, Institute for Defense Analyses

SHULONG CHU, Tsinghua University

ADMIRAL RICHARD MIES

ROBERT PFALTZGRAFF, JR., Institute for Foreign Policy Analysis

The U.S.-China strategic relationship is entering a period of new dynamism and uncertainty, as China builds up and diversifies its nuclear “counter-deterrent” and as the United States builds down its nuclear forces but also diversifies its strategic military toolkit with missile defenses, etc. How can a stable relationship be preserved in this dynamic period? What kind of a strategic relationship should the U.S. want and what kind of strategic relationship can it have with China? And vice versa?

Brad Roberts is a member of the research staff at the Institute for Defense Analyses in Alexandria, Virginia. He is also a Professorial Lecturer in International Affairs at George Washington University. He served previously as Editor of the Washington Quarterly and as a Research Fellow at the Center for Strategic and International Studies and also as Chair of the research advisory council of the Chemical and Biological Arms Control Institute. His research interests focus on the intersection of counterproliferation and nonproliferation strategies.

Shulong Chu is a Professor of Political Science and International Relations, and the Deputy Director of Institute of International Strategic and Development Studies at Tsinghua University in Beijing, China. He is also a Professor at China's Ministry of Foreign Affairs' Party School, an adviser of international reporting at China's Central Television (CCTV). Chu's research covers international relations, strategic studies, American foreign policy, and China's foreign and security strategies. His most recent publication is the book China's Foreign Strategy and Policy.

Admiral Richard Mies presently serves as the Chairman of the Department of Defense Threat Reduction Committee. Admiral Mies completed a distinguished 35-year career in the U.S. Navy. He commanded U.S. Strategic Command for four years prior to retirement. As Commander in Chief, he was directly responsible for the command and control of the nation's strategic nuclear forces supporting the national security objective of strategic deterrence. Admiral Mies has a unique breadth and depth of operational and policy experience in undersea and strategic warfare. He has held both U.S. and Allied commands at senior military levels and is one of a few flag officers to complete qualification as both a submariner and naval aviation observer.

Robert Pfaltzgraff, Jr. is the President of the Institute for Foreign Policy Analysis and the Shelby Cullom Davis Professor of International Security Studies at The Fletcher School, Tufts University. He has advised key administration officials on military strategy, defense modernization, the future of the Atlantic Alliance, proliferation and counterproliferation issues, and arms control policy. He has lectured widely at government, industry, and academic forums in the United States and overseas. These include the NATO Defense College, National Defense University, the Marine Corps University, the Army War College, the Air University, the Naval War College, and the Armed Forces Staff College. He currently serves on the International Security Advisory Board (ISAB), U.S. State Department.

INNOVATING THE REGIME

Monday, April 6

2:00 pm

Horizon

CHAIR: PETER HAYES, Nautilus Institute

PIERRE GOLDSCHMIDT, Carnegie Endowment for International Peace

MONIKA HEUPEL, Freie Universität Berlin

RAMESH THAKUR, Balsillie School of International Affairs

The fabric of the global nonproliferation regime has been ripped apart by recent nonproliferation developments, including the North Korean nuclear test, the U.S.-India nuclear deal, the prospect of a rapid spread of fuel cycle facilities in East Asia, and the diffusion of dual capable nuclear weapons knowledge and technology. The Obama administration may inject new energy into reconstituting the regime. This panel outlines some of the important innovations that must be included in any strategy to make the regime capable of containing the proliferation of nuclear weapons.

Peter Hayes is the Executive Director of the Nautilus Institute for Security and Sustainable Development, a non-governmental policy-oriented research and advocacy group. Hayes graduated with a degree in History from the University of Melbourne. He has a doctorate from the Energy and Resources Group at the University of California, Berkeley. Professionally active as an environment and energy consultant in developing countries (working for United Nations Environment Programme, Asian Development Bank, World Bank, Canadian International Development Research Council, U.S. Agency for International Development, United Nations Development Programme), he also writes widely about security affairs in the Asian-Pacific region. He was Executive Director of the Environment Liaison Centre in Nairobi, Kenya in 1974–76. He was Deputy Director of the Commission for the Future (Australian Government) from 1989–1991. He has visited the DPRK seven times. He is a member of the Pacific Council on International Policy, the Western partner of the Council on Foreign Relations; and the U.S. Committee of the Council for Security Cooperation in the Asia Pacific. He was awarded a MacArthur Fellowship in 2000.

Pierre Goldschmidt is a Nonresident Senior Associate at the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace. Goldschmidt is also a member of the Board of Directors for the Association Vinçotte Nuclear (AVN). AVN is a non-profit, Authorized Inspection Organization charged with verifying compliance of nuclear power plants with Belgian safety regulations. Goldschmidt was the Deputy Director General, Head of the Department of Safeguards, at the International Atomic Energy Agency from 1999 to June 2005. The Department of Safeguards is responsible for verifying that nuclear material placed under safeguards is not diverted to nuclear weapons or other nuclear explosive devices and that there is no undeclared nuclear material or activities in non-nuclear weapons States party to the NPT. Before the IAEA, Goldschmidt was, for 12 years, Director General of SYNATOM, the company responsible for the fuel supply and spent fuel management of seven Belgian nuclear plants. For six years, Goldschmidt was a member of the Directoire of EURODIF, the large French uranium enrichment company. Goldschmidt has headed numerous European and international committees, including as Chairman of the Uranium Institute in London and Chairman of the Advisory Committee of the EURATOM Supply Agency.

Monika Heupel is a Lecturer in International Relations at the Center for Transnational Relations, Foreign and Security Policy at the Freie Universität Berlin. Previously, she pursued post-doctoral research at the German Institute for International and Security Affairs, Chatham House, the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace and the United Nations University. From 2002 to 2005, she was a Research Associate at the University of Bremen. She holds a Ph.D. in Political Science from the University of Bremen and an M.A. in International Relations from the University of Warwick. Heupel's research focuses on the implications of the emergence of transnational security threats such as cross-border proliferation networks, transnational terrorism and so-called "new wars."

Ramesh Thakur is the founding Director of the Balsillie School of International Affairs in Waterloo, Canada. He was previously Vice Rector / Senior Vice Rector of the UN University (and Assistant Secretary-General of the United Nations); a Commissioner and one of the principal authors of The Responsibility to Protect, Senior Adviser on Reforms, and Principal Writer of UN Secretary-General Kofi Annan's second reform report; and serves on the international advisory boards of institutes in Africa, Asia, Europe and North America. His books include The United Nations, Peace and Security: From Collective Security to the Responsibility to Protect—winner of the ACUNS 2008 Award for the best book on the UN system, and The United Nations and Global Governance: An Unfinished Journey.

PART 1: TOWARD A NUCLEAR POWER RENAISSANCE? FACT OR FICTION

Monday, April 6

4:00 pm

Amphitheater

CHAIR: TOM ISAACS, Stanford University / Lawrence Livermore National Laboratory

ROBERT ROSNER, Argonne National Laboratory

JOHN ROWE, Exelon Corporation

SHARON SQUASSONI, Carnegie Endowment for International Peace

Times have changed; concerns over global warming, energy security, and energy adequacy have put nuclear power squarely back into important discussions about future energy supply. The growth and, importantly, the spread of nuclear power and fuel cycle facilities bring both tremendous opportunity for improved well being for the planet and its citizens and renewed attention to many well known concerns. Is nuclear power about to reemerge as a major energy source both in the U.S. and internationally? If so, what changes in technical, political, societal, and economic circumstances are required, including those necessary to allay nonproliferation concerns?

Tom Isaacs is currently a Consulting Professor at Stanford University in the Center for International Security and Cooperation (CISAC). He remains the Director of Lawrence Livermore National Laboratory's (LLNL's) Office of Planning, and Special Studies. Isaacs has an extensive background in science policy and work experience directly relevant to issues at the intersection of energy security, national security, the environment, and waste management as well as to the U.S. and other repository programs in particular. He is a member of the National Academy of Sciences Nuclear and Radiation Studies Board. Before joining LLNL, he held a variety of positions within the U.S. Department of Energy. These included serving as Executive Director of the Department of Energy's Advisory Committee on External Regulation of DOE Nuclear Safety, and Deputy Director of the Office of Geologic Repositories for the department's radioactive waste program. Isaacs received a B.S. degree in Chemical Engineering from the University of Pennsylvania and an M.S. degree in Engineering and Applied Physics from Harvard University.

Robert Rosner is the William E. Wrather Distinguished Service Professor in Astronomy & Astrophysics and Physics at the University of Chicago (UChicago) and President of UChicago Argonne, LLC and Director of Argonne National Laboratory. Prior to his appointment as Director of Argonne (2004), he served as its Chief Scientist (2002–2004), as Chairman of Astronomy & Astrophysics at UChicago (1991–1997), and as the Rothschild Visiting Professor at Cambridge University (2004). Rosner is a student of astrophysical fluid dynamics and plasma physics. He was elected to the American Academy of Arts and Sciences (2001), and is a Fellow of the American Physical Society. He holds a Ph.D. (Physics, 1976) from Harvard and a B.S. (Physics, 1969) from Brandeis.

John Rowe is the Chairman and CEO of Exelon Corporation, a utility holding company headquartered in Chicago. Exelon has the largest market capitalization in the electric utility industry. Its retail affiliates serve 5.4 million customers in Illinois and Pennsylvania, and its generation affiliate operates the largest fleet of nuclear power plants in the nation. Rowe is the most senior chief executive in the utility industry, having served in such positions since 1984. Rowe has led Exelon since its formation in 2000. Rowe previously held CEO positions at the New England Electric System and Central Maine Power Company. Rowe serves as Chairman of the Nuclear Energy Institute, is a past Chairman of the Edison Electric Institute, and is a Co-Chairman of the National Commission on Energy Policy, an industry and environmental organization dealing with climate change.

Sharon Squassoni is a Senior Associate in the Nonproliferation Program at the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace and has been analyzing nonproliferation, arms control and national security issues for two decades. Prior to joining Carnegie in 2007, she helped advise Members of Congress as a specialist in weapons of mass destruction at the Congressional Research Service. She has also served in the executive branch, beginning her government career as a nuclear safeguards expert in the Arms Control and Disarmament Agency. Her last position at the State Department was Director of Policy Coordination in the Nonproliferation Bureau. Squassoni has contributed to journals, magazines, and books on nuclear proliferation and defense. Her most recent publications include: "The New Disarmament Discussion," in Current History, January 2009 and Nuclear Energy: Rebirth or Resuscitation?, a Carnegie Report, February 2009.

ARE THE REQUIREMENTS FOR EXTENDED DETERRENCE CHANGING?

Monday, April 6

Polaris

CHAIR: SCOTT SAGAN, Stanford University

LUKASZ KULESA, Polish Institute of International Affairs

GEORGE PERKOVICH, Carnegie Endowment for International Peace

AMBASSADOR YUKIO SATOH, Japan Institute of International Affairs

Extended deterrence is back on the analytic and policy agenda. North Korea's nuclear test, China's rising power, Russia's assertiveness, Iran's unceasing uranium enrichment, and American interest in nuclear disarmament have renewed U.S. allies' attachments to extended deterrence. How are the challenges and requirements of credible extended deterrence evolving? How should deterrence be integrated with reassurance and cooperation in overall security strategies in Europe and Northeast Asia? What role, if any, should nuclear weapons play in extended deterrence?

Scott Sagan is a Professor of Political Science and Co-Director of Stanford's Center for International Security and Cooperation. Before joining the Stanford faculty, Sagan was a Lecturer in the Department of Government at Harvard University and served as a Special Assistant to the Director of the Organization of the Joint Chiefs of Staff in the Pentagon. He is the author of The Limits of Safety (Princeton University Press), co-author (with Kenneth Waltz) of The Spread of Nuclear Weapons: A Debate Renewed (W.W. Norton), and the editor of Inside Nuclear South Asia (Stanford University Press, forthcoming).

Lukasz Kulesa is the Head of the Research Office at the Polish Institute of International Affairs (PISM). He has been working as an analyst at PISM since 2003, dealing mainly with issues of international security, proliferation of WMD, security policy of Poland, and developments of NATO. Between 2005 and 2008, he was a coordinator of the International Security Project at the Institute. His recent publications in English include: "Missile Defence Dossier: The Polish Perspective," "Points de Vue," Fondation pour la Recherche Strategique, 2007 and "Nuclear disarmament in accordance with Article VI and the principle of undiminished security for all," Europe and Nuclear Weapons: Deterrence, Disarmament, (Non-) Proliferation, Bruylant Editions, 2008.

George Perkovich is a Vice President for Studies and the Director of the Nonproliferation Program at the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace. His research focuses on nuclear strategy and nonproliferation, with a focus on South Asia and Iran, and on the problem of justice in the international political economy. He is the author of the award-winning book India's Nuclear Bomb. He is co-author of the Adelphi Paper, Abolishing Nuclear Weapons, published in September 2008 by the International Institute for Strategic Studies. This paper is the basis of the book, Abolishing Nuclear Weapons: A Debate, which includes 17 critiques by 13 eminent international commentators and is now available at www.carnegieendowment.org/nuclearweaponsdebate. Perkovich is also co-author of a major Carnegie report, Universal Compliance: A Strategy for Nuclear Security, a blueprint for rethinking the international nuclear nonproliferation regime. He served as a speechwriter and foreign policy adviser to Senator Joseph Biden from 1989 to 1990. Perkovich is an advisor to the International Commission on Nuclear Nonproliferation and Disarmament and a member of the Council on Foreign Relations' Task Force on U.S. Nuclear Policy.

Ambassador Yukio Satoh is a member of Japan's National Commission on Public Safety and also Vice Chairman of the Board of Trustees of the Japan Institute of International Affairs (JIIA). Previously, he was the President of JIIA (2003–2009). While in the Japanese foreign service from 1961 to 2002, he served as the Permanent Representative of Japan to the United Nations (1998–2002), Ambassador of Japan to Australia (1996–1998) and Ambassador of Japan to the Netherlands (1994–96). His Ministry of Foreign Affairs postings included Director-General, Intelligence and Analysis Bureau (1990–92) and Director-General, North American Affairs Bureau (1992–94). He was also the Chief of Prefectural Police of Miyazaki Prefecture (1984–85). He has written numerous articles on Japanese foreign and security policy.

CHAIR: PATRICIA LEWIS, James Martin Center for Nonproliferation StudiesJAMES ACTON, Carnegie Endowment for International PeaceAMBASSADOR LINTON BROOKS*JAMES DOYLE, Los Alamos National LaboratoryCOMMENTATOR, ANGELA WOODWARD, Verification Research, Training and Information Centre

A number of important issues involving verification are on the global agenda: U.S.-Russian strategic arms control, denuclearization in North Korea, reform of IAEA safeguards, nuclear disarmament, national debates about CTBT ratification and international discussions about an FMCT. What common ground on verification is emerging? What disputes appear likely? Can a new relationship be forged between intelligence gathering and verification regimes? How much verification is useful or necessary? Is verification a side-show or the central issue?

Patricia Lewis is the Deputy Director and Scientist-in-Residence of the James Martin Center for Nonproliferation Studies at the Monterey Institute of International Studies. Prior to this appointment, she was the Director of the United Nations Institute for Disarmament Research (UNIDIR). From 1989 to 1997, she was the Director of the Verification Research, Training and Information Centre (VERTIC) in London. She holds her B.Sc.(Hons) in Physics from the University of Manchester and her Ph.D. in Nuclear Physics from the University of Birmingham. Lewis was a Commissioner on the 2004–2006 Weapons of Mass Destruction Commission, chaired by Dr. Hans Blix. In 1998–1999, she served as a member of the Tokyo Forum for Nuclear Nonproliferation and Nuclear Disarmament, having previously served as an external reviewer for the Canberra Commission. Currently, Lewis is an Advisor to the International Commission on Nuclear Nonproliferation and Disarmament (ICNND). She was appointed UK Governmental Expert to the 1990 UN Study on the Role of the UN in Verification and appointed consultant on conventional forces verification to the UK Foreign and Commonwealth Office from 1989–1990. She was the Elizabeth Poppleton Fellow at the Australian National University in 1992 and a Visiting Lecturer at Imperial College London from 1991–92.

James Acton is an Associate in the Nonproliferation Program at the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace. Before joining the Endowment in October 2008, Acton was a Lecturer at the Centre for Science and Security Studies in the Department of War Studies at King's College London where he co-authored the Adelphi Paper, Abolishing Nuclear Weapons. Prior to that, Acton was the science and technology researcher at the Verification Research, Training and Information Centre (VERTIC), where he was a participant in the UK-Norway dialogue on verifying the dismantlement of warheads. He holds a Ph.D. in Theoretical Physics from Cambridge University.

Ambassador Linton Brooks, now an independent consultant, served from July 2002 to January 2007 as Administrator of the Department of Energy's National Nuclear Security Administration, where he was responsible for the U.S. nuclear weapons program and for the Department's international nuclear nonproliferation programs. He has five decades of experience in national security, much of it associated with nuclear weapons. His government service includes Chief U.S. Negotiator for the START Treaty, Assistant Director of the United States Arms Control and Disarmament Agency, Director of Defense Programs and Arms Control at the National Security Council and a number of Navy and Defense Department assignments as a career naval officer.

---

James Doyle is a Technical Staff Member in the Nuclear Nonproliferation Division at Los Alamos National Laboratory. His professional focus is on systems analysis, strategic planning and policy development. Doyle holds a Ph.D. in International Security Studies from the University of Virginia. At Los Alamos, he has managed projects with Russia's nuclear weapons institutes on the joint development of technologies and procedures to monitor the dismantlement and storage of nuclear warheads and fissile materials. Doyle's articles on nuclear security issues have appeared in Defense News, Science and Global Security, Nonproliferation Review, Arms Control Today, Comparative Strategy and Strategic Review. He is most recently the Editor of Nuclear Safeguards, Security and Nonproliferation: Achieving Security with Technology and Policy, Elsevier, New York.

Angela Woodward is the Executive Director of the Verification Research, Training and Information Centre (VERTIC). Her research focuses on the legal, policy and technology aspects of arms control and disarmament verification. She is a leading expert in biological weapons law and verification and has spoken and published widely in this field. In 2005, she initiated VERTIC's programme to provide legislative assistance for national implementation of the BTWC. Along with VERTIC colleagues, she is currently working on the UK-Norway process on verifying nuclear warhead dismantlement. Woodward served as an Advisor to the Chair of the UN Group of Governmental Experts on Verification in All its Aspects in 2006.

Anne Lauvergeon was appointed Chief Executive Officer of AREVA group in 2001. From 1999–2001, she served as Chairman and Chief Executive Officer of Cogema. Prior to joining AREVA, Lauvergeon was Senior Executive Vice President at Alcatel Telecom, responsible for international organization and the group's interests overseas in the energy and nuclear fields. In 1998, she was appointed as a member to the Alcatel Executive Committee. Lauvergeon became a Partner of Lazard Frères & Cie in Paris in 1995.

Lauvergeon also has extensive experience in government. She was named Advisor for Economic International Affairs at the French Presidency in 1990, and Deputy Chief of its staff in 1991. It was during this time that Lauvergeon became "Sherpa" to the President, in charge of preparations for the G7 Summits. From 1985 to 1988, she supervised the underground utilities activities in and around Paris and was appointed, in 1988, Deputy Director of the General Mining Council. In 1984, she directed the European safety studies for the chemical industry of CEA (Commissariat à l'Énergie Atomique), the public technological research organization in France.

Lauvergeon began her professional career in 1983 in the iron and steel industry. She graduated from the French National School of Mining Engineer (École des Mines) and the French "École Normale Supérieure" with a degree in Physics.

CHAIR: KENNETTE BENEDICT, Bulletin of the Atomic Scientists

LAWRENCE KORB, Center for American Progress

ALLISON MACFARLANE, George Mason University

A breakfast briefing sponsored by the Bulletin of the Atomic Scientists

Board members of the Bulletin of the Atomic Scientists discuss current threats to humanity, as indicated by the Doomsday clock, and propose ways that governments, including the Obama administration, can reduce the dangers posed by nuclear weapons and climate change.

Kennette Benedict is the Executive Director and Publisher of the Bulletin of the Atomic Scientists, a publishing and communications organization that informs the public about the dangers of nuclear weapons, climate change, and other threats to humanity. From 1992–2005, she directed the International Peace and Security Program at the John D. and Catherine T. MacArthur Foundation, where she established and directed its initiative in the former Soviet Union from 1992–2002.

Lawrence Korb is a Senior Fellow at the Center for American Progress. He was an Assistant Secretary of Defense in the Reagan administration and is an expert on national security, arms control, and U.S. defense spending. He wrote American National Security: Policy and Process and The Fall and Rise of the Pentagon, and was awarded the Defense Department's Medal for Distinguished Public Service.

---

Allison Macfarlane is Associate Professor of Environmental Science and Policy at George Mason University. She is a geologist who specializes in technical issues of nonproliferation and the nuclear fuel cycle, and is a leading expert on Yucca Mountain. She edited Uncertainty Underground: Yucca Mountain and the Nation's High-Level Nuclear Waste, which considers the scientific uncertainties of nuclear waste disposal.

Tuesday, April 7

7:30 am

Horizon

CHAIR: DAVID FRANZ, Midwest Research InstituteANNE HARRINGTON, U.S. National Academy of SciencesRON LEHMAN II, Lawrence Livermore National Laboratory

A breakfast briefing sponsored by The National Academies

The government's first Cooperative Threat Reduction (CTR) programs were created in 1991 to eliminate the former Soviet Union's nuclear, chemical, and other weapons and prevent their proliferation. The programs have accomplished a great deal, but must be fundamentally redesigned to meet the magnitude of new security challenges, particularly at the nexus of weapons of mass destruction and terrorism. A bold new vision is needed to create a new version of CTR—CTR 2.0. Hailed by Senator Richard Lugar as a "critically important set of recommendations that should guide the Obama administration's efforts to expand the Nunn-Lugar Program around the world," Global Security Engagement: A New Model for Cooperative Threat Reduction, proposes a new, more flexible, and responsive CTR model that will require strong White House leadership, working across the executive branch, with Congress, and with a broad range of non-governmental and international partners. Panelists will discuss this new National Academies' report and how its recommendations can be implemented now in areas such as North Korea and with international partners such as Russia, to initiate the transition to a fully-integrated and upgraded CTR.

David Franz is the Vice President and Chief Biological Scientist of the Midwest Research Institute. He served in the U.S. Army Medical Research and Materiel Command for 23 of 27 years. He served as Commander of USAMRIID and as Deputy Commander of the Medical Research and Materiel Command. Franz was the Chief Inspector on three UN Special Commission biological warfare inspection missions to Iraq and served as technical advisor on long-term monitoring. He also served as a member of the first two U.S.-UK teams that supported the Trilateral Joint Statement on Biological Weapons and as a member of the Trilateral Experts' Committee for biological weapons negotiations. His current activities relate to international engagement in the life sciences as a component of national security policy.

Anne Harrington is the Director of the U.S. National Academy of Sciences Committee on International Security and Arms Control. Previously, she served in the State Department, where she was Acting Director and Deputy Director of the Proliferation Threat Reduction Office, and U.S. government expert on nonproliferation and cooperative threat reduction. She focused on developing policy and implementing programs to prevent the proliferation of WMD and missile expertise in Russia, and launched similar efforts Iraq and Libya. She was based in Moscow from 1991–1993, where she was Senior Advisor to the U.S. Delegation to the International Science and Technology Center Preparatory Committee and a Science Analyst at the U.S. Embassy in Moscow.

Ronald Lehman II is the Director of the Center for Global Security Research at Lawrence Livermore National Laboratory and also Chairman of the Governing Board of the International Science and Technology Center. He serves on the Department of Defense Threat Reduction Advisory Committee, and served on the Defense Science Board Task Forces on Globalization and Security and on Tritium, and on the National Research Council's Committee on Science, Technology, and Health Aspects of the Foreign Policy Agenda of the United States. President Clinton appointed him to the five-member President's Advisory Board on Arms Proliferation Policy. He also served as Director of the Arms Control and Disarmament Agency.

Morning Concurrent Panels

PART 2: CHALLENGES TO GLOBAL NUCLEAR POWER: TECHNOLOGICAL, POLITICAL, AND ECONOMIC

Tuesday, April 7

9:00 am

Amphitheater

CHAIR: ARIEL LEVITE, Carnegie Endowment for International Peace

JACQUES BOUCHARD, Commissariat à l'Énergie Atomique

CHARLES MCCOMBIE, Arius Association

ERNEST MONIZ, Massachusetts Institute of Technology

What are the obstacles to a genuine worldwide nuclear energy renaissance? Panelists will provide an international perspective on the political and policy challenges, technical and technological developments, and economic and industrial considerations that may aid or hinder the promotion of nuclear energy.

Ariel Levite is a Nonresident Senior Associate at the Carnegie Endowment. Earlier, he was the Principal Deputy Director General (Policy) at the Israeli Atomic Energy Commission (2002–2007), a Visiting Fellow at the Stanford Center for International Security and Cooperation (2000–2002), Deputy Israeli National Security Advisor (Defense Policy; 1999–2000), and Head of the Bureau of International Security at the Israeli MOD. Prior to joining government service, Levite worked as a Senior Research Associate at the Jaffee Center for Strategic Studies, Tel-Aviv University. He has authored numerous books and articles on issues of strategy, military doctrine, deterrence, arms control, proliferation, and intelligence. He holds a Ph.D. in Government from Cornell University.

---

Jacques Bouchard has been Chairman of the Generation IV International Forum (GIF) since 2006. Bouchard joined the Commissariat à l'Énergie Atomique (CEA) in 1964 and was appointed Head of the Experimental Physics Unit in 1973, then Head of the Nuclear Engineering Department in 1975. In 1982, he became Head of the CEA's Fast Neutron Reactor Department in Cadarache, then, in 1990, Head of CEA's Nuclear Reactor Division. From 1994 to 2000, he headed CEA's military application division, then its entire nuclear energy sector until 2004. Since that date, he has served as Special Adviser to CEA's Chairman.

Charles McCombie is an independent strategic and technical advisor to various national and international waste management programmes. Currently, one of his prime responsibilities is as Executive Director of the Arius Association, which is dedicated to advancing multinational initiatives for the safe and secure management of spent fuel and radioactive wastes. He has over 30 years experience in the nuclear field, with almost 20 years as Technical Director of the Swiss National Disposal Programme. He is an author or co-author of over 150 published papers and served on numerous review and advisory bodies, including the Board on Radioactive Waste Management of the U.S. National Research Council. McCombie has B.Sc. in Natural Philosophy (Physics) and a Ph.D. in Physics.

Ernest Moniz is the Cecil and Ida Green Professor of Physics and Engineering Systems, Director of the Energy Initiative, and Director of the Laboratory for Energy and the Environment at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology (MIT), where he has served on the faculty since 1973. He served as Head of the Department of Physics and as Director of the Bates Linear Accelerator Center. His research focus is energy technology and policy, including a leadership role in MIT interdisciplinary technology and policy studies on the future of nuclear power, coal, nuclear fuel cycles, natural gas, and solar energy in a low-carbon world. Moniz served as Under Secretary of the Department of Energy from 1997 until January 2001 and, from 1995 to 1997, as Associate Director for Science in the Office of Science and Technology Policy in the Executive Office of the President.

THE FUTURE OF THE CTBT

Tuesday, April 7

9:00 am

Polaris

CHAIR: DARYL KIMBALL, Arms Control Association

SIDNEY DRELL, Stanford University

AMBASSADOR JAMES GOODBY, Hoover Institution

AMBASSADOR TIBOR TÓTH, Comprehensive Nuclear Test Ban Treaty Organization Preparatory Commission

The Obama administration has signaled that it will reach out to the Senate to reconsider and support U.S. ratification of the Comprehensive Test Ban Treaty (CTBT) “as soon as practical.” The panel will discuss the key technical and policy developments relating to the treaty over the past decade, including the maintenance of the U.S. arsenal in the absence of testing and capabilities to detect and deter nuclear test explosions.

Daryl Kimball became the Executive Director of the Arms Control Association (ACA) in 2001. ACA is a non-profit membership organization dedicated to public understanding and support for effective arms control solutions. ACA publishes the monthly journal, Arms Control Today. From 1989–1997, Kimball was the Director of Security Program at Physicians for Social Responsibility where he helped lobby for the 1992 U.S. nuclear test moratorium legislation and negotiation of a zero-yield CTBT. From 1997–2001, he was Executive Director of the Coalition to Reduce Nuclear Dangers where he led NGO efforts to win support for U.S. CTBT ratification.

Sidney Drell is a Professor of Physics, Emeritus, at the SLAC National Accelerator Laboratory. He is also a Senior Fellow at Stanford University’s Hoover Institution. He has been an adviser to the U.S. government on technical national security and arms control issues for more than 40 years. He currently serves on the Boards of Governors that manage the Lawrence Livermore National Laboratory and the Los Alamos National Laboratory, and he is an active member of JASON, a group of academic scientists who work on issues of national importance for the U.S. government.

Ambassador James Goodby is currently a Research Fellow at the Hoover Institution, Stanford University, where he works with former Secretary of State George Shultz and noted physicist Professor Sidney Drell. He also is affiliated with the Brookings Institution and MIT. He served for over 30 years in the U.S. Foreign Service and was given five presidential appointments to ambassadorial rank, including as U.S. Ambassador to Finland. He has written and edited many books and articles while teaching at Stanford, Georgetown, Syracuse, and Carnegie Mellon Universities. Horizon

CHAIR: JOBY WARRICK, The Washington Post

DAVID ALBRIGHT, Institute for Science and International Security

ROLF MOWATT-LARSEN, Harvard University

RALF WIRTZ, Oerlikon Leybold Vacuum

Few have anticipated the difficulties resulting from shutting down the A.Q. Khan network and preventing additional illicit nuclear trade by the likes of Iran, Syria, and North Korea. The challenges in the private sector, intelligence, and law enforcement remain formidable. Panelists will describe the achievements and problems in bringing down the Khan network and the changes needed to deal with pervasive illicit nuclear trade.

Joby Warrick has been a Washington Post reporter since 1996, serving on both the national and investigative staffs. A Pulitzer Prize winner, he was part of the Post's special investigations team for nine years, writing primarily about WMD proliferation and weapons trafficking. His articles about international proliferation threats earned him the Overseas Press Club of America's Bob Considine Award in 2004 for best newspaper interpretation of international affairs. Since 2007, Warrick has served as a national security reporter covering intelligence, terrorism and nonproliferation.

David Albright is the President of the Institute for Science and International Security (ISIS) in Washington, D.C. Prior to founding ISIS, Albright worked as a Senior Staff Scientist at the Federation of American Scientists and was a member of the research staff of Princeton University's Center for Energy and Environmental Studies. From 1992 until 1997, Albright cooperated with the IAEA Action Team, focusing on analyses of Iraqi documents and past procurement activities. In June 1996, he was the first non-governmental inspector of the Iraqi nuclear program. Albright received a 1992 Olive Branch Award for a series of articles he wrote, along with Mark Hibbs, on the Iraqi nuclear weapons program for the Bulletin of the Atomic Scientists. Albright holds a Masters of Science in Physics from Indiana University and a Masters of Science in Mathematics from Wright State University. In addition to the Outstanding Alumni Award, Albright also received an Honorary Doctorate of Humane Letters from Wright State University in 2007.

ENFORCING A WORLD WITHOUT NUCLEAR WEAPONS

Tuesday, April 7

11:00 am

Amphitheater

CHAIR: STEVEN MILLER, Harvard University

ALEXEI ARBATOV, Carnegie Moscow Center

MARTIN BRIENS, Ministry of Foreign Affairs, France

AMBASSADOR RICHARD BUTLER AC, New York University / Penn State University

States will not abolish nuclear weapons if they are not highly confident that everyone will comply with key disarmament agreements and nonproliferation rules. Reliable robust enforcement of compliance will be vital. Do recent compliance and enforcement experiences tell us anything about the future? What are the gaps between what is needed for enforcement and what the international community is now prepared to do?

---

Steven Miller is Director of the International Security Program, Editor-in-Chief of the quarterly journal, International Security and also co-editor of the International Security Program's book series, Belfer Center Studies in International Security (published by MIT Press). Previously, he was Senior Research Fellow at the Stockholm International Peace Research Institute (SIPRI) and taught Defense and Arms Control Studies in the Department of Political Science at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. Miller is editor or co-editor of some two dozen books, including, most recently, Offense, Defense, and War (October 2004), The Russian Military: Power and Policy (September 2004), Nationalism and Ethnic Conflict—Revised Edition (2001), and The Rise of China (2000).

Miller is a Fellow of the American Academy of Arts and Sciences, where he has been a member of their Committee on International Security Studies (CISS). He is also co-chair of the U.S. Pugwash Committee, a member of the Council of International Pugwash, a member of the Advisory Committee of the Stockholm International Peace Research Institute (SIPRI), a member of the Scientific Committee of the Landau Network Centro Volta (Italy), and formerly a member of the Council of the International Institute for Strategic Studies (IISS). He did his undergraduate degree at Occidental College in Los Angeles. He received a Master of Arts in Law and Diplomacy and a Ph.D. in International Relations from the Fletcher School of Law and Diplomacy.

CHAIR: WILLIAM POTTER, James Martin Center for Nonproliferation Studies

JEAN DU PREEZ, James Martin Center for Nonproliferation Studies

SONIA FERNÁNDEZ-MORENO, Autoridad Regulatoria Nuclear, Argentina

AMBASSADOR SAMEH SHOUKRY, Embassy of the Arab Republic of Egypt

COMMENTATOR: ARIEL LEVITE, Carnegie Endowment for International Peace

Nuclear-Weapon-Free-Zones (NWFZs) are among the most promising approaches for attaining both disarmament and nonproliferation objectives. And yet, they tend to be underappreciated and poorly understood by many advocates and critics of a “Road to Zero.” This panel examines the lessons learned from several existing NWFZs and assesses the prospects for and potential benefits of additional zones.

CHAIR: MICHAEL KREPON, The Henry L. Stimson Center

PHILIP COYLE, World Security Institute

PAVEL PODVIG, Stanford University

DINGLI SHEN, Fudan University

ASAT tests by China and the United States in 2007 and 2008 have clarified satellite vulnerabilities. This panel considers the nexus between space and nuclear issues, particularly the implications of space warfare capabilities on nuclear force postures. The panel will also consider new diplomatic initiatives for space.

Michael Krepon is Co-Founder of the Henry L. Stimson Center and the author or editor of thirteen books and over 350 articles. Prior to co-founding the Stimson Center, Krepon worked at the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace, the U.S. Arms Control and Disarmament Agency during the Carter administration, and in the U.S. House of Representatives, assisting Congressman Norm Dicks. Krepon divides his time between Stimson's South Asia and Space Security projects. The South Asia project concentrates on escalation control, nuclear risk reduction, confidence building, and peacemaking between India and Pakistan. The Space Security project seeks to promote a Code of Conduct for responsible space-faring nations and works toward stronger international norms for the peaceful uses of outer space. Krepon also teaches in the Politics Department at the University of Virginia. He received an M.A. from the School of Advanced International Studies, Johns Hopkins University and a B.A. from Franklin & Marshall College. He also studied Arabic at the American University in Cairo, Egypt.

About The Carnegie Endowment

The Carnegie Endowment for International Peace is a private, nonprofit organization dedicated to advancing cooperation between nations and promoting active international engagement by the United States. Founded in 1910, Carnegie is nonpartisan and committed to achieving practical results. Through research, publishing, convening and, on occasion, creating new institutions and international networks, Endowment associates shape fresh policy approaches. Their interests span geographic regions and the relations among governments, business, international organizations, and civil society, focusing on the economic, political, and technological forces driving global change.

Building on the successful establishment of the Carnegie Moscow Center, the Endowment has added operations in Beijing, Beirut, and Brussels to its existing offices in Washington and Moscow, pioneering the idea that a think tank whose mission is to contribute to global security, stability, and prosperity requires a permanent international presence and a multinational outlook at the core of its operations.

About the Nonproliferation Program

The Carnegie Endowment's Nonproliferation Program is an internationally recognized source of knowledge and policy thinking on efforts to curb the spread and use of nuclear weapons. Carnegie's analysis consistently stays at the forefront of proliferation developments (e.g., on Iran, North Korea, South Asia, and Russia) and nonproliferation policy debates (e.g., on national fuel cycle capabilities or regime enforcement). In Washington, Moscow, Brussels, New Delhi, and increasingly in Beijing, the program hosts public and private seminars, speeches, and workshops, where leading officials and experts seek to overcome obstacles to reducing the danger of nuclear war. The program works publicly and behind-the-scenes in active Track II diplomacy to promote solutions to challenges such as the Iranian nuclear case, U.S.-Russian threat reduction cooperation, new approaches to managing the nuclear fuel cycle, and the future of nuclear disarmament.

Approximately every eighteen months, Carnegie convenes the Carnegie International Nonproliferation Conference, widely considered to be the premier event in its field and attracting over 800 government officials, policy and technical experts, academics, and journalists from around the world.

Our publications and commentary include books, working papers, and articles. Major recent publications include Abolishing Nuclear Weapons: A Debate; Nuclear Energy: Rebirth or Resuscitation; Are New Nuclear Bargains Attainable?; Concrete Steps to Improve the Nonproliferation Regime; and Nuclear Weapons after the Cold War.

The Nonproliferation Program website www.carnegieendowment.org/npp, which National Journal applauded as a "top site" that "mak[es] voluminous information easily accessible," offers current news, analysis, official documents, maps, charts, and other key resources. The free, twice-weekly Proliferation Newsletter provides an electronic summary of news and analysis.

Carnegie Vice President for Studies—Global Security and Economic Development, George Perkovich, is the Director of the Nonproliferation Program in Washington. Deepti Choubey is the Deputy Director, Sharon Squassioni is a Senior Associate, James Acton is an Associate, Karim Sadjadpour is an Associate, Kathleen Donaldson is a Program Assistant, Nima Gerami is a Research Assistant, and Kimberly Misher is a Junior Fellow. Pierre Goldschmidt, Ariel E. Levite and Shahram Chubin are Nonresident Senior Associates.

The program in Washington is complemented by the nonproliferation activities at the Carnegie Moscow Center. Dmitri Trenin is the Director of the Carnegie Moscow Center, Alexei Arbatov is a Scholar-in-Residence, and General Vladimir Dvorkin is a Visiting Scholar.

JESSICA T. MATHEWS*PRESIDENT, CARNEGIE ENDOWMENT FOR INTERNATIONAL PEACE

Jessica T. Mathews was appointed President of the Endowment in 1997. Her career includes posts in the executive and legislative branches of government, in management and research in the nonprofit arena, and in journalism. She was a Senior Fellow at the Council on Foreign Relations from 1993 to 1997 and served as Director of the Council's Washington program. While there, she published her seminal 1997 Foreign Affairs article, "Power Shift," chosen by the editors as one of the most influential in the journal's 75 years.

From 1982 to 1993, she was founding Vice President and Director of Research of the World Resources Institute, an internationally known center for policy research on environmental and natural-resource management issues. She served on the editorial board of the Washington Post from 1980 to 1982, covering energy, environment, science, technology, arms control, health, and other issues. Later, she became a weekly columnist for the Washington Post, writing a column that appeared nationwide and in the International Herald Tribune. From 1977 to 1979, she was Director of the Office of Global Issues of the National Security Council, covering nuclear proliferation, conventional arms sales policy, chemical and biological warfare, and human rights. In 1993, she returned to government as Deputy to the Undersecretary of State for Global Affairs.

Mathews is a Director of Somalogic Inc. and HanesBrands Inc., and a Trustee of the Century Foundation, the Nuclear Threat Initiative, and the International Crisis Group. She is also a member of the Council on Foreign Relations and the American Philosophical Society. She has previously served on the boards of the Brookings Institution, Radcliffe College, the Rockefeller Brothers Fund, the Surface Transportation Policy Project, and the Joyce Foundation, among others. Mathews holds a B.S., magna cum laude, from Radcliffe College and a Ph.D. in Molecular Biology from the California Institute of Technology.

NONPROLIFERATION PROGRAM—WASHINGTON, D.C.

GEORGE PERKOVICH, VICE PRESIDENT FOR STUDIES—GLOBAL SECURITY AND ECONOMIC DEVELOPMENT AND DIRECTOR OF THE NONPROLIFERATION PROGRAM

George Perkovich is a Vice President for Studies and the Director of the Nonproliferation Program at the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace. His research focuses on nuclear strategy and nonproliferation, with a focus on South Asia and Iran, and on the problem of justice in the international political economy. He is the author of the award-winning book India's Nuclear Bomb. He is co-author of the Adelphi Paper, Abolishing Nuclear Weapons, published in September 2008 by the International Institute for Strategic Studies. This paper is the basis of the book, Abolishing Nuclear Weapons: A Debate, which includes 17 critiques by 13 eminent international commentators and is now available at www.carnegieendowment.org/nuclearweaponsdebate. Perkovich is also co-author of a major Carnegie report, Universal Compliance: A Strategy for Nuclear Security, a blueprint for rethinking the international nuclear nonproliferation regime. He served as a speechwriter and foreign policy adviser to Senator Joseph Biden from 1989 to 1990. Perkovich is an advisor to the International Commission on Nuclear Nonproliferation and Disarmament and a member of the Council on Foreign Relations' Task Force on U.S. Nuclear Policy.

DEEPTI CHOUBEY
DEPUTY DIRECTOR, NONPROLIFERATION PROGRAM

Deepti Choubey is the Deputy Director of the Nonproliferation Program at the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace. Choubey is responsible for establishing strategic priorities for the program, conducting research and generating policy analysis, designing and implementing new outreach initiatives, and leading the Carnegie International Nonproliferation Conference. Her research interests include the calculations of non-nuclear-weapon states, the intersection of nuclear nonproliferation and climate-change agendas, and the role of nonproliferation for long-term U.S. foreign policy. Her recent publications include Carnegie Reports Are New Nuclear Bargains Attainable? and with Stephen Schwartz, Nuclear Security Spending: Assessing Costs, Examining Priorities.

Prior to joining the Carnegie Endowment in 2006, Choubey was Director of the Peace and Security Initiative (PSI) for the Ploughshares Fund. The PSI is a network of more than 160 think tanks, advocacy organizations, grassroots groups, and funders that work together to increase their capacity to influence U.S. national security policies. Before joining Ploughshares, Choubey worked for Ambassador Nancy Soderberg in the New York office of the International Crisis Group. Choubey earned her Master of International Affairs, with a focus on South Asia security policy, from Columbia University's School of International and Public Affairs. She also became a Foreign Language and Areas Studies Fellow in Hindi and Urdu. Before that, Choubey was a strategy consultant advising market-leading companies in Asia, Europe, and the United States. She earned her undergraduate degree in Government from Harvard University.

SHARON SQUASSONI
SENIOR ASSOCIATE, NONPROLIFERATION PROGRAM

Sharon Squassoni is a Senior Associate in the Nonproliferation Program at the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace and has been analyzing nonproliferation, arms control and national security issues for two decades. Prior to joining Carnegie in 2007, she helped advise Members of Congress as a specialist in weapons of mass destruction at the Congressional Research Service. She has also served in the executive branch, beginning her government career as a nuclear safeguards expert in the Arms Control and Disarmament Agency. Her last position at the State Department was Director of Policy Coordination in the Nonproliferation Bureau. Squassoni has contributed to journals, magazines, and books on nuclear proliferation and defense. Her most recent publications include: "The New Disarmament Discussion," in Current History, January 2009 and Nuclear Energy: Rebirth or Resuscitation?, a Carnegie Report, February 2009.

JAMES ACTON
ASSOCIATE, NONPROLIFERATION PROGRAM

James Acton is an Associate in the Nonproliferation Program at the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace. Before joining the Endowment in October 2008, Acton was a Lecturer at the Centre for Science and Security Studies in the Department of War Studies at King's College London where he co-authored the Adelphi Paper, Abolishing Nuclear Weapons. Prior to that, Acton was the science and technology researcher at the Verification Research, Training and Information Centre (VERTIC), where he was a participant in the UK-Norway dialogue on verifying the dismantlement of warheads. He holds a Ph.D. in Theoretical Physics from Cambridge University.

KARIM SADJADPOUR*ASSOCIATE, NONPROLIFERATION PROGRAM AND DEMOCRACY PROGRAM

Karim Sadjadpour is an Associate at the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace. Sadjadpour joined Carnegie after four years as the chief Iran analyst at the International Crisis Group based in Tehran and Washington, D.C. A leading researcher on Iran, Sadjadpour has conducted dozens of interviews with senior Iranian officials, and hundreds with Iranian intellectuals, clerics, dissidents, paramilitaries, businessmen, students, activists, and youth, among others. Frequently called upon to brief U.S. and EU officials about Middle Eastern affairs, he has testified before the U.S. Senate Foreign Relations Committee, given lectures at Harvard, Princeton, and Stanford Universities, and spoken before the Council on Foreign Relations and the Asia Society.

Sadjadpour was named a Young Global Leader by the World Economic Forum in Davos, Switzerland and has been the recipient of numerous academic awards, including a Fulbright scholarship. He has lived in Latin America, Europe, and the Middle East.

KATHLEEN DONALDSON*PROGRAM ASSISTANT, NONPROLIFERATION AND SOUTH ASIA PROGRAMS

Kathleen Donaldson is the Program Assistant for the Nonproliferation Program as well as the South Asia Program at the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace. Donaldson earned her B.A. in Foreign Affairs with a minor in History from the University of Virginia.

NIMA GERAMI*RESEARCH ASSISTANT, NONPROLIFERATION PROGRAM

Nima Gerami is Research Assistant in the Nonproliferation Program at the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace. He also serves as Editor of Proliferation News, Carnegie's twice-weekly e-newsletter on efforts to prevent the spread and use of nuclear weapons. Gerami has worked and studied extensively in Latin America, including at the Buenos Aires-based Nueva Comunicación, the largest public relations firm in South America, and the Center for Macroeconomic Studies of Argentina (CEMA). He is currently a graduate student in Government with a focus on Security Studies at Johns Hopkins University. His research interests include Third World alliance behavior, the role of non-nuclear-weapon states, Iranian foreign policy, and Latin American international relations.

KIMBERLY MISHER*JUNIOR FELLOW, NONPROLIFERATION PROGRAM

Kimberly Misher is the Junior Fellow in the Nonproliferation Program at the Carnegie Endowment. She conducts research on U.S. missile defense efforts in Europe, extended deterrence and Russian nonproliferation developments. She has provided research support for Abolishing Nuclear Weapons: A Debate, Are New Nuclear Bargains Attainable?, and Nuclear Security Spending: Assessing Costs, Examining Priorities. She also assists in leading the 2009 Carnegie International Nonproliferation Conference. Prior to joining Carnegie, Misher worked for Selig Harrison at the Center for International Policy.

Misher is a graduate of Brown University, where she received an honors degree in Political Science for her thesis investigating illicit transnational flows in Russia. In 2008, she became a Kathryn Davis Fellow in the study of Russian at Middlebury College.

PIERRE GOLDSCHMIDT
NONRESIDENT SENIOR ASSOCIATE

Pierre Goldschmidt is a Nonresident Senior Associate at the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace.
